

Robin RosebrughWorkplace Consultant, Steelcase

Robin thrives in a role that involves creativity, problem solving, challenges, teamwork and learning opportunities. She is insatiably curious and enjoys being a thought leader in her field. Prior to the diploma program at BCIT for Interior Design, she completed her Bachelor of Science from UBC and was awarded an NSERC grant to study neurodegenerative diseases. Her love of problem solving and design also led her to become a Sustainable Building Advisor through CaGBC.

Robin has a strong passion for continually developing her education, specifically focusing on the influence that our designed environment has on our behaviors and wellbeing. Currently, she is pursuing her Master's degree in Organizational Psychology. Her role as an architecture and design manager with Steelcase allows her to share her passions of both design and research with the architecture and design community. With her diverse background, she is able to communicate both creative ideas and the evidence-based science that supports them.
